OCTOBER IS BREAST CANCER AWARENESS MONTH

Breast Cancer Awareness Month is an important reminder to stay familiar with your body and pay attention when something looks or feels different.

While a breast lump is one of the most commonly recognized warning signs, breast cancer can sometimes cause changes in the skin as well. Keep an eye out for new or unexplained redness, swelling, warmth, dimpling or puckering of the skin—sometimes described as an “orange peel” appearance—as well as changes around the nipple or a rash or sore that doesn't seem to heal.

Many skin and breast changes are caused by conditions unrelated to cancer, but persistent or unusual changes are always worth bringing to the attention of your healthcare provider. Knowing what is normal for your body makes it easier to recognize when something isn't.

This October, let Breast Cancer Awareness Month be a reminder to check in with yourself, keep up with recommended screenings, and never ignore a change that doesn't feel right.

RESET, REFRESH & GLOW

Summer may be winding down, but the effects of sun, heat, and long days outdoors can linger on your skin. Dryness, dullness, uneven tone, and signs of sun damage may become more noticeable as we head into fall.

Give your skin the seasonal reset it deserves with a personalized treatment from Kourtney or Hannah, our medical aestheticians. They'll customize your treatment to address your individual concerns using medical-grade skincare products and advanced techniques designed to restore hydration, improve tone and texture, and help your skin look and feel its best—all under the direction of Dr. Hicks-Graham.

Fall is the perfect time to reset, refresh, and glow!
